

...Standard Qualities, Lowest Prices...

THE STORE LINKS together these giants of Merchandising strength. Standard Qualities, where prices are too high, do not induce. And low prices where quality has suffered are uninteresting. So these two united, we hold, as trade inducements that have no superior. No store can offer more. No store should give you less. And as a practical guarantee of these statements, the store always hold out to you your money, and invites you; yea, begs you—to trade back—if for any reason whatsoever, you are dissatisfied.

This morning we turn back a page in the store's doings and invite you once more to revel in these bargains of Remnants and Odds and Ends. All through the store price-cards tell the story of Winter's declining. And tell how determined we are to move everything in its season.

SHOE BARGAINS Don't Skip This

As some of the best values in the house are to be found therein. An odd pair of shoes is much harder to dispose of than a remnant of calico or other piece goods, hence, the cut is deeper in order that the inducement to buy be greater therefor.
